The goal of the C.L. Dellums Leadership School is to train union and community members active in the Black community so they can strengthen relationships between the Black community and the labor movement. This year’s program will focus on the intersection of mass incarceration, race, and labor.

Working closely with the Bay Area Black Worker Center, participants will develop organizing skills, learn more about the history of mass incarceration and its impact on communities and workers, and gain a better understanding of the landscape of organizations in the East Bay working on mass incarceration issues.

This year’s school will take place on four alternating Saturdays and will include both classroom and field work. Participants will be selected after an application and interview process.

To apply please visit us online at: laborcenter.berkeley.edu/dellums-union-leadership-school

For questions regarding the program please contact:
Steven Pitts at (510) 643-6815 or spitts1@berkeley.edu or Danielle Mahones at (510) 642-6811 or danielle.mahones@berkeley.edu.

For questions regarding logistics please contact: Clementina Jara at (510) 643-7048 or at zenaida@berkeley.edu.

The 2016 C.L. Dellums Leadership School welcomes participation from people of all races, ethnicities, national origins, and gender identities.